

CLASSIC DRIVER

Bertone Nuccio concept shown ahead of Geneva debut

Lead

Ahead of the Nuccio concept's forthcoming Geneva launch, Bertone has released another set of images of the car. This time, computerised renderings give a much clearer impression of the design.

A few weeks ago, Bertone released teaser sketches of the concept which showed a resemblance to the firm's wedge-shaped concept cars of the 1970s – in particular the Stratos, which we featured in last week's Classic Concepts series.

Now the design house has released computerised images of the car, whose highlights include a poised silhouette, steeply raked windshield and a pair of winged buttresses. Although the concept as a whole is unlikely to make production, you can expect some of its design flourishes to translate onto future Bertone-styled motor cars.

The 2012 Geneva Motor Show takes place between the 8 and 18 March.

Photos: Bertone

Gallery

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/cars/bertone-nuccio-concept-shown-ahead-geneva-debut>

© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.