

CLASSIC DRIVER

A Norton Commando called 'Misty Green'

Lead
Based on a Norton 750 Commando, this mint-coloured café racer, nicknamed 'Misty Green' by its owner, continues to look fantastic whatever the weather...

Going Commando

The property of Karl Frey from Texas, the stripped-back Norton 750 Commando shown here was built by Fuller Moto - an Atlanta, Georgia-based custom motorcycle workshop. The photos were taken by photographer Matthew Jones shortly before an appearance at the recent Handbuilt Motorcycle Show in Austin, Texas. Named after the weather conditions on the shoot, the bike features 'Norton Green'-coloured highlights on the wheels, tank, seat unit and hand-finished alloy fairing. The exhaust also displays a very clever design. The bike took around two years to complete and was originally inherited from Frey's uncle.

Photos: matthewjonesphoto.com

Gallery

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/bikes/norton-commando-called-misty-green> © Classic Driver. All rights reserved.