

CLASSIC DRIVER

Jaguar's F-type SVR has something to roar about

Lead

Thought the Jaguar F-type R couldn't get any more potent? Think again. This is the new 200mph Jaguar F-type SVR...

The Jaguar F-type SVR is Special Vehicle Operations' first series-production car, and follows the principles learned with such cars as the Jaguar Project 7 and the Range Rover SVR. That means less weight, achieved with the use of carbon-ceramic brakes and a lightweight titanium exhaust, and more power - some 575HP from the supercharged 5.0-litre V8, good for 0-60mph in 3.7sec and a top speed of 200mph. Available in both coupé and convertible guises, deliveries of the all-wheel-drive sports car will begin in the summer, following its debut at the Geneva Motor Show in March.

Photos: Jaguar

Gallery