Snapshot, 1970: Denny drowns his sorrows

Lead

It's 19 April 1970, and McLaren driver Denny Hulme is dejectedly swigging a Coke on the pit wall, lamenting the mechanical problem that's just caused his retirement from the Spanish Grand Prix...

The former World Champion looked set for a bright start at Jarama, qualifying second on the grid between pole-sitter Jack Brabham and eventual victor Jackie Stewart. However, after just ten laps he's retired with a broken distributor, forcing him to watch on gloomily from the pit lane. In the searing dry heat, his only consolation is a bottle of ice-cold Coca-Cola - but perhaps the Kiwi will switch to San Miguel once his team-mate and countryman Bruce McLaren secures his place on the podium...
