Lead

A new exhibition in London is showing a collection of photographs of David Bowie shot by Brian Duffy, the star photographer who was instrumental in creating some of the late pop star's most memorable alter egos...

Starman

Taking place at Proud Chelsea until 5 February, 'Bowie by Duffy' portrays the pop legend as captured by Brian Duffy, who was among the most popular and influential photographers of the 1960s and '70s. Signed original prints from five photo shoots are displayed, and mix candid images with posed shots of the Starman, the latter of which were often carefully composed by the pop star and Duffy to convey the eccentric personalities of Bowie's many personas.
