Want to ride the same bike as the Lamborghini Squadra Corse do?

Lead

Who better to judge the agility, downforce, performance, and technology of a triathlon bike than the drivers of Lamborghini's Squadra Corse? After years of testing and eventually receiving the thumbs up from Lamborghini, Cervélo has released its new P5X 'Lamborghini Edition'...

Two-wheeled Raging Bull

As a self-proclaimed maker of the 'world's fastest and lightest bikes', Canada-based bicycle manufacture Cervélo has upped its game with its new special-edition P5X. In collaboration with Lamborghini — and thus named the Lamborghini Edition — Cervélo claims this to be “the fastest and most technologically advanced triathlon bike of all time.” The black and yellow frame with a Y-shaped pattern was created by Lamborghini's Centro Stile, the world-famous design lab behind the Huracán and the Aventador, and just 25 will be made. The super bike was unveiled on 7 March at the Geneva Motor Show event and can be purchased for 20,000 US dollars.
