

CLASSIC DRIVER

Can you name all the cars in the new James Bond trailer?

Lead

We're not sure whether James Bond bothers to use a device as profane as a smartphone, but if he does, we're quite sure the first thing he does in the morning is to check Classic Driver. How else can you explain the growing number of tasteful collector cars in his garage?

Aston Martin might be in the midst of financial turmoil, but that doesn't seem to bother Her Majesty's petrolhead special agent James Bond. For the latest Bond thriller No Time to Die, which is due to hit the silver screen in April 2020, agent 007 has extended his fleet of Astons, which now appears to include an updated version of his iconic DB5 (machine gun headlights included), a V8 Vantage last seen in 1987's The Living Daylights and a new DBS Superleggera. In the trailer at least, the latter is steered by Bond's female counterpart (and potential replacement) named Nomi.

There are countless other cars we glimpsed in the new trailer, each of which we're sure has been documented by blogs in the vast wilderness of the Internet. What truly excites us is that our favourite villain Ernst Stavro Blofeld makes a comeback – and that the film was co-written by Fleabag's Phoebe Waller-Bridge. Our fingers are crossed for some timeless entertainment.

Video: James Bond 007

Gallery

Includes video

Has video

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/cars/can-you-name-all-cars-new-james-bond-trailer>

